Ref. No. Report for MSW Research Orientation Programme (2022-23) / / 202

College Name: Loksevak Madhukarrao Chaudhari College of Social Work

Objective: The MSW Research Orientation Programme for the academic year 2022-23 continued the institution's tradition of providing MSW students with essential research knowledge and instilling ethical research practices. The primary objective was to equip participants with the skills and knowledge required for conducting responsible and competent research in the field of social work.

Participants: A total of 57 MSW students actively participated in the program, demonstrating their enthusiasm for enhancing their research skills and knowledge.

Date: The MSW Research Orientation Programme took place over four days, from October 14 to 17, 2022.

Program Details:

- 1. Lectures and Presentations: The program featured a series of lectures and presentations by experienced researchers and faculty members. These sessions covered a wide range of research-related topics, including research methodologies, research design, data collection, data analysis, and ethical considerations in research.
- 2. Hands-On Workshops: Participants engaged in hands-on workshops that allowed them to apply their research knowledge practically. These workshops included activities such as data collection and data analysis, providing students with valuable hands-on experience.
- 3. Interactive Discussions: The program encouraged interactive discussions and group activities to foster knowledge sharing, critical thinking, and problem-solving among the participants.

Outcomes:

The MSW Research Orientation Programme for the academic year 2022-23 successfully achieved its objectives, leading to several meaningful outcomes:

- Continued Development of Research Knowledge: Participants deepened their research knowledge and skills, expanding their understanding of research methodologies and ethical considerations.
- Strengthened Research Practices: The program reinforced ethical research practices, emphasizing the importance of conducting research with integrity and responsibility.
- Practical Research Skills: Through hands-on workshops and interactive discussions, students continued to enhance their research skills, including literature review, data collection, and data analysis.
- Promotion of Collaboration: The program maintained its emphasis on networking and collaboration, fostering a culture of idea exchange and potential research partnerships among participants.

Conclusion:

The MSW Research Orientation Programme for the academic year 2022-23 successfully continued its mission of equipping students with essential research knowledge and ethical research practices. The program's consistency in providing strong research foundations reflects the institution's commitment to preparing MSW students for responsible and competent research in the field of social work. The institution looks forward to future programs that will further enhance research capabilities and promote a culture of ethical and collaborative research among MSW students.
